

A close-up photograph of a flower, likely a gerbera, with large, layered petals. The petals are primarily yellow, with some showing a gradient to a deep red or maroon color. The lighting is warm, creating soft shadows and highlights on the delicate texture of the petals. The background is blurred, focusing attention on the flower's details.

Deutronomy 32:05 They have corrupted themselves, their spot is not the spot of his children: they are a perverse and crooked generation.