

A close-up, high-angle shot of a lush, green basil plant. The leaves are vibrant green, serrated, and have a glossy texture. Numerous small, yellow, star-shaped flowers are visible, growing in clusters along the stems. The background is slightly blurred, showing more of the same plants and some hints of other colors like purple and red, suggesting a garden setting. The lighting is bright, creating strong highlights and shadows on the leaves.

Job 06:05 Doth the wild ass bray when he hath grass? or loweth the ox over his fodder?