

A close-up photograph of a single, vibrant red rose. The petals are tightly curled, showing the classic spiral pattern of a rose. The color is a deep, rich red with some lighter, almost white, highlights on the edges of the petals, suggesting a soft light source. The background is dark and out of focus, making the rose the central subject. Overlaid on the upper portion of the rose is white text in a serif font.

Psalms 119:20 My soul breaketh for the longing that it hath unto thy judgments at all times.